Research Experience

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF NEGRO WOMEN

Director, Research, Public Policy and Information Center for African American Women, 2007-Present

As the head of NCNW's RPPI Center, Dr. Jones-DeWeever develops and leads the organization's research/action strategy toward producing policy change that positively impacts the lives of Black women, their families, and their broader communities. In so-doing Dr. Jones-DeWeever is actively involved in proposal writing and development, project management and design, and study implementation. Dr. Jones-DeWeever has over 15 years of research experience. Her background includes case-study and survey design and implementation, focus group coordination and moderation, personal interviewing, data collection and analysis, survey design, data analysis, information synthesis and report writing. Dr. Jones-DeWeever is also actively involved in information dissemination through extensive media interaction and through participation in speaking engagements across a wide-range of subject areas.

INSTITUTE FOR WOMEN'S POLICY RESEARCH

Director, Poverty, Education and Social Justice Programs, 2002-2007

Dr. Jones-DeWeever heads IWPR's Division on Poverty, Education and Social Justice. To that end, she engages in the development and direction of research and dissemination strategies aimed at spurring positive policy change. Specifically, Dr. Jones-DeWeever develops and implements a research agenda that examines the well-being of women and their families from a variety of perspectives including: employment and economic opportunity; issues of access and quality as they relate to early care and education at the elementary, secondary, and post-secondary levels; and issues of poverty and its lingering implications as it relates to opportunity in America as well as its impact on the health and overall well-being of women, their families, and their broader communities. To support this work, Dr. Jones-DeWeever engages in proposal development and writing, project management, survey design and implementation, case-study design and implementation, focus group coordination and moderation, personal interviewing, data collection and analysis, information synthesis and report writing. She also disseminates her work through conducting briefings with legislators and their staff, holding speaking engagements across the country, and engaging in extensive media interaction.

MACRO INTERNATIONAL INC.

Research Associate/Survey Manager, 1997-2000

For Macro, Dr. Jones-DeWeever served in the dual role of Research Associate and Survey Manager. In this capacity, Dr. Jones-DeWeever contributed to numerous research projects sponsored by the Department of Education and the Corporation for National Service. Her duties included project management, survey management, program evaluation, proposal writing, report writing, focus group moderation, one-on-one interviewing, case study implementation and analysis, survey design, data set creation, and the analysis of both qualitative and quantitative data.

MARYLAND HOUSE OF DELEGATES

Ph.D. Fellow, 1996 & 1997 Legislative Sessions

As a Doctoral Fellow for the Maryland House of Delegates, House Appropriations Committee, Dr. Jones-DeWeever worked under the direction of the Committee Chairman, Del. Howard Rawlings. She conducted research on urban education, school funding, and student performance issues. This work entailed the analyzation of several school reform efforts in urban areas across the country along with specific in-depth analysis of the management and performance of Baltimore City Public Schools. She presented the results of her research to Del. Rawlings and other policymakers and education administrators in both written and verbal formats.

CONGRESSIONAL BLACK CAUCUS FOUNDATION: INSTITUTE FOR POLICY RESEARCH AND EDUCATION

Research Analyst, 1994-1995

For the Institute for Policy Research and Education, Congressional Black Caucus Foundation, Dr. Jones-DeWeever wrote position papers and fact sheets on late-breaking political developments. She wrote extensively on elementary and secondary education, welfare reform, child care issues, crime, unemployment, and the survival of Historically Black Colleges and Universities. Dr. Jones-DeWeever also designed survey research instruments during her stay at the CBCF: IPRE.

JOINT CENTER FOR POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC STUDIES

Research Analyst, 1993-1994

For the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, Dr. Jones-DeWeever performed statistical analyses of the Kasarda Urban Underclass Database, and the National Housing Survey. These analyses were used in monographs, reports and various publications on the relationship between residential segregation and the persistence of de facto segregation in America's schools, particularly those schools outside of the former confederacy.

UNIVERSITY OF AKRON

Supervisor, Survey Research Center, 1990-1991

For the University of Akron's Survey Research Center, Dr. Jones-DeWeever contributed to the development of state and national telephone surveys, supervised interviewers while the surveys were in the field, and performed data analysis and interpretation of statistical data.
